San Diego Visual Arts Network presents the wackiest Eat Your Art Out event yet with another intimate lunch for 10, a combination of art patrons and artists. This year the theme is Haunted High Tea, organized by Nikki Haritatos of Dr Sketchy's Anti-Art School San Diego and it is being held in the Sterlings Mobile Barber Co.'s Airstream Trailer in the parking lot of the The Ruby Room (1271 University Ave, SD 92103). dubious origin? Guests will experience an afternoon of hauntingly beautiful fun - unexpected and out of the ordinary – all in the spirit of high tea and Halloween.

Part one of this treat-filled jaunt starts with lunch and delicious libations. Talented artists Albertine Feurer-Young, Nancy Carp, Yesenia Maybee, and Matthew Hohlfeld will guide patrons in the creative phase of the journey, where they will engage in discussion about criteria for judging an anti-art school contest. If they desire, they will have an opportunity to make an award with their very own hands and imagination (supplies provided, of course).

Part two of the frightfully delightful adventure takes place at a Dr Sketchy's Anti-Art School San Diego session where guests will experience what it's like to be immortalized in sketch form, joining the gorgeous model Zoe Tantrum who will instruct them on the finer points of posing. Our art patrons will confer, deliberate and judge the contest and award the winner. And, for the sweet and sinful finish to the Haunted High Tea, a generous helping of sketching (guest are invited to try their hand) and masterpieces of another kind: luscious petit fours with a twist and other tiny tea treats. Lunch starts with nibbles including match.com pigs (bacon wrapped dates), sumptuous crostini, quirky quiches, followed by gourmet sandwiches and exotic salads. Tea time features Athena's teapot-shaped cake pops by CutiePops plus goodies for ghouls.

Doesn't look like Sweeney Todd, but can you be sure?
